Sworn to and subscribed before me this twentylourth day of September, A. D. 1888. JOHN T. C. CLARE. Notary Public.

The turmoil caused by the discussion of the overhead-wire nuisance and the substitution of an underground electric system might have been spared Washington by the priefest study of Chicago's example. There is a city whose climate is nfinitely more difficult to deal with than ours, and yet the underground system works so well that none of the electric companies would be willing to restore its poles, with their never-ceasing repairs and their constant menace to human life. The first experiment was the result of an effort of the city to run poles for its fire-alarm wires through a fashionable district. The inhabitants rose in protest, and, as they could not fight the case, subscribed a fund for putting the wires underground. This change was found so excellent that the fire department raised a clamor for the burying of all wires, as the overhead system often resented a fatal obstruction to its operations. t, however, until a hotel burned in mid-winter, and several lives were lost, because the water froze on the wires and made a barrier across which no efective work could be done, did the common council become alarmed. When it did it ordered all wires PARASOLS AND UMBRELLAS. in the business district to be put beneath the surface within six months, and the mayor showed so much determination about enforcing this command that the companies attacked their task with spirit. The methods employed were various. The electric light people dug a ditch in the middle of the streets and put in asphaltum blocks drilled for the passage of cables through them. The telegraph and telephone people dug a trench, about a foot deep, close to the curbstone, and laid in it three-inch iron pipes filled with gutta percha insulated wires. They could lay a mile or two of these pipes in a night, so that the regular city traffic was little disturbed. Now, some of them use sewer pipe, and others wooden boxes, but all with the same effect; and all that is necessary, when the wires of one set are exhausted, is to A MERCHANT TAILOR open the trench and put in another line of pipe, filled like the first. There is no tearing up of streets or blockading of business, but 5,000 miles of wire, thus laid, are in successful operation today, and several more miles will be added shortly. The public mind hereabout has been so confused with the technical talk about currents and cut-offs, and conductors and insulators, which to plain people is an unintelligible jargon, that it has generally been supposed that some insurmountable obstacle stood in the way of the proposed change. It is obvious from Chicago's case that this is a needlessly fearful view. John P. Barrett, an electrician connected with that city's government, solves the whole underground wire problem by the same quiet but effective process that Horace Greeley suggested for the res of specie payments after the panic of 1857, "The way to put wires underground," he says, "is to put them underground." Anything that will insulate a wire will do for a conduit; and it stands to reason that the common insulators made of cloth and grease, which, exposed overhead to the action of the weather, soon wear out and become not only useless, but positively dangerous, would last for a long time under protection. The folly, therefore, of complaining at the difficulty of underground insulation while regarding overhead insulation with complacency, is one of those inconsistencies which can be explained only on the supposition that a dollar spent on permanent

The cordiality of the relations existing between Surgeon-General Hamilton and his proteges at Camp Perry, when he parted from them the other day, was in marked contrast with the assaults nade upon that officer when he first insisted upon the resort to refugee camps instead of permitting the people who were fleeing from the scourge to go whithersoever they pleased, with the chance of carrying infection with them. By this time, doubtless, the more sensible persons in the camp have come to realize the seriousness of the situation and the wisdom of the apparently severe measures adopted by Dr. Hamilton. One of the most astonishing features of a yellow fever epidemic is the insidious manner of its spread. Even certain articles of food, which would be least suspected of perlious tendencies. owing to the processes employed in their prepara-tion for market and the table, have been shown by experience to be disease-breeders of the most dangerous sort. It is recorded, for example, that in he epidemic of 1867, when several of the Texas PHILADELPHIA STORE. towns had established a quarantine against Galveston, a steamboat from that city, sailing up the Trinity river, was stopped by the ealth officer of Liberty a short distance from there, and forbidden to make its accustomed landing. The captain said that if permitted to put ashore a sack of coffee, which he had brought up for a citizen of Liberty, he would turn back. His request was granted, the sack was thrown out on the river bank, and the boat retreated. The citizen got his coffee, opened it, caught the fever, and fied; his family and servants were | We are offering inducements in Blankets and Com taken down immediately afterward, and from them the disease spread like wildfire Fall and Winter Underwear, complete stock of through the whole place. A similar case occurred on the Nueces River, near Corpus Christi. | Hosiery and Gloves. The fever had broken out in that town, and a man who was under contract to supply certain persons in the country with coffee took a sack of it, drove out fitteen miles to a certain mesquit tree where, according to agreement, he divided the coffee into portions, marked each with the name of the person who was to receive it, and went away, confideat that by such precautions he had avoided conveying any contagion to his rural customers. The persons who were to receive the coffee came the ext day to the tree and got it. Every one of their families were stricken down within a few days, and nearly every patient died. Here the thorough shaking-up of the coffee through a country drive of fifteen miles in a wagon, and its exposure atterward, divided into small parcels, for twenty-four hours consecutively, in a tree in an open field, put the tenacity of the fever germs to a evere test; and their survival with fatal powers showed that no preventive measures, however inonvenient to a few persons or for a limited period, sands of innocent people is the possibility in the corporation, when dividend-day comes around, than one hundred cents spent in patchwork.

The fluctuations in Wall street quotations for the last ten days have caused a flutter among speculators, but the promptness with which the market righted itself after its recent shock proved the hopeful spirit pervading business generally. The iron trade is growing firmer, coal is moving in large quantities, prices in wool are a shade higher, and foreign commerce has improved. The rates for money on call are still very easy, but they are tiffening for time loans to be used in mercantile transactions. The chief features of the season nancially, are the freedom of collections in limost all parts of the country, and the broader 20 PER CENT OFF stribution of money, enabling local enterprises to supply themselves at home instead of depend-ing on the great centers of capital. Altogether, the outlook for the opening winter is excellent-an improvement even upon the fail of 1880; for then the boom, while magnificent in its way, was largely confined to the speculative field, instead of spreading itself over the legitimate industries of the country.

THE SHERMAN KING VAPORIZER.

For use in urinals, cosspools, musty cellars, hospitals, and on steam and sailing vessels it is indispensable. In the sick room, the hot house, market, restaurant, hotel, crowded factory, car or waiting room, sail, hen house or dog kennel, in every place inhabited by man or beast this vaporizer can do a useful work. It is a better agent for fighting diphtheria, fever, and various coutarious diseases than can be found in the use of any ordinary odorless distinfectant, which is liable to be too strong and not properly regulated. Consumptives and people suffering with catarrh should keep a vaporizer in operation in their sleeping rooms.

THE WEARING OF BLACK

Black is no longer an undesirable costume for Ladies and Misses not in Mourning; but rether shirary, as it is a becoming, comfortable wholesome, convenient and economical dress; becoming since Black is dressy and refining to all ages and complexions, comfortable because all weights and materials come in Black; whole some, since the dye is indellible, and no longer changes or comes off on the skin or under garments; convenient and economical because fewer dresses are needed, always becoming. never out of style, and can be made over and worn longer than is possible with a colored

A prominent feature of our Black Dress Goods Stock is the full line of B. Priestley & Co.'s celebrated Black Fabrics, both in Silk-Warp and All-Wool qualities. Black is more generally worn in America, both in and out of Mourning, than in any other country, and on every hand may be noted its increasing popu-

The most conspicuous of B. Priestley's line of fabrics is the Black Silk-warp Henriettas, which have many points of superiority over other black dress materials, not the least important being their graceful hansing and draping qualities. It is considered the material above all others for the widow's best dress. Tuis fabric is shown in a number of qualities, made from fine silk and the best Australian wool. You can readily distinguish them by their softness and beauty, and regularity of finish. The wool gives the softness and the siik lends the finish, tone and elasticity-s happy combination giving an almost classical grace to the draping effect. Will not fade nor grow rusty with age. This fabric is also particularly effective when made up in combination with silk-either Gros Grain, Faille or Moire. Two shades of Black, Jet and the Blue-cas . The extraordinary popularity of Colored Silkwarp Henriettas during the past winter and spring is no doubt yet fresh in your minds. You also remember the hundreds of exquisite shades. Naturally a great many of these shade are now unsalable, and manufacturers have but one recourse—to re-dye them black. B. Priestley says "There will be in the market during the coming season more Black Silk-warp Henriettas, which have been re-dyed from unsalable colors into blacks, than there has been during the past five years put together."

B. Priestley makes no Colored Silk-warp Henriettas, and as we sell no Black Silk-warp Henriettas but his, we cannot sell you any re-dyed goods, and you are sure of buying here only B. Priestley's Black Silk-warp fabrics.

PRIESTLEY'S SURAH TWILL This handsome fabric has the remarkable quality of looking like a much more expensive material than it really is a quality especially rare in black goods. A suit of this material drapes like a cloth of double the price. It furnishes a most effective surface for braiding. and cleans like a Priestley Henrietta, and no more need, or can, be said for any material. It will be found specially desirable for winter suits, for habits, for mid-season jackets, and for what a Paris authority calls "the predominant fashion in wrappings—the long cloak." 40 inches wide, $1 and $1.25 per yard.

In eleven distinct qualities.

We have sold this brand of Black Cashmeres for the past seven years, and that they have steadily grown in popular favor is evidenced by their increasing sale, we having been compelled to make larger purchases, each succeeding sea-

These Cashmeres are first woven "in the gray, or raw state of the material," by Dauphinot, whose reputation for superior weaving is of the best. They are then dyed by Guillamet, the celebrated French dyer, whose name alone is sufficient guarantee of the thoroughness of all work which passes through his hands.

We take pleasure in being able to place such high-grade Cashmeres before our customers, and have no hesitation in saying that we consider them unrivaled in point of evenness of weight, fineness of texture, uniformity of dye, and beauty of finish. The eleven grades are marked at the following popular prices, being somewhat lower than we have heretofore sold them:

Quality E, Quality L, " . F, 50c. G, 56c. N, 90c. 62%c. 0, 95c. 69c. K. 75e.

These Cashmeres measure full 39 inches in width (called 40), and are guaranteed never to wear brown or rusty, and to always retain their softness and beautitus finish. Two shades of black-jet and blue-black. BLACK AND WHITE DRESS GOODS.

Black and White Dress Goods, while generall considered second-mourning fabrics, are much affe ted by Ladies not in mourning. We are showing an excellent line at present, embracing pin-head checks, hair-line stripes, wide and narrow stripes, broken and large plaids. The b. oad stripes are particularly stylish; 50c.,75c., $1, $1.25 and $1.50.

OURTAULD'S BLACK ENGLISH CHAPES. It is conceded that these Crapes are the most reliable, most durable, and the cheapest, because they are the best. We sell them because we aim to keep the best of everything in our we aim to keep the best of everything in our special line. These Crapes never deteriorate, nor go out of fashion, and can be made up over and over again as occasion requires it. They are the recognized Crapes for wear with B. Priestiey's Black Dress Goods on account of their absolute matching qualities, which is of vital importance and most difficult of attainment in any other brand of Crapes.

28-in. Courtauld's Best English Crapes, 75c., 81, 81.25, 81.50, 82, 82.50, 83, 83.50, and 84.2-in. Courtauld's Best English Crapes, 82.75.
